

Camlann Medieval Village

Background

The Client

Camlann Medieval Village is a living history museum focusing on life in rural England in 1376. They offer a themed restaurant and various medieval activities such as live craft demonstrations and arts performances .

The Problem

The current website does not showcase the museum's unique offerings and is difficult to navigate. This makes it harder for potential visitors to make decisions about their visit.

Camlann's Offerings

STRENGTHS

- Unique & Novel
- Educational
- Entertaining
- Accessible for all ages
- Variety of activities

WEAKNESSES

- Farther out location
- Scope of operation
- Approachability of the subject matter
- Poor online presence
- Inability to purchase a day ticket online
- Limited hours

Current Website

The original homepage's content is a single column that takes up about 1/3 of the page and doesn't utilize most of the space available. It almost seems like it is intended to only be used on mobile and not web. It is also seems like there is only a way to buy event tickets and not day tickets.

The navigation bar also lead to some confusion for me using it, as I expected the home button to be more towards the right hand side or center.

Overall this page functions, and has the information present, but it is more difficult to find specific information without reading the whole page.

At Windsor Castle on St. George's Day, 1348, Edward III held his first celebration of the Order of the Garter in fulfillment of his vow to establish an Arthurian order. Thereafter were annual celebrations of St. George's Day marked with tournaments and feasting. In keeping with this tradition, we invite you to join us in a sumptuous three-course feast with fifteen total dishes, among them venison, roast duck, and shellfish.

Private feasts and/or events are available upon request. Email camlannmuseum@gmail.com for information regarding menus and pricing.

Current Website

The events page is functional but confusing at first glance. Like the home page, it suffers from being a single column of text with little organization or supplementary visuals

The about us page utilizes a layout more than the other pages, using an accent color and photos as well. It mainly suffers from spacing issues. The current color palette is appealing to me and suits the brand well so I may utilize something similar in my version of the website.

Solution

Goals

Buisness

- Draw in visitors
- Promote upcoming events
- Attract donations and volunteers

Brand

- Recognition
- Consistency
- Showcase unique offerings

User

- Easily make purchases
- Be able to plan visit
- Make decisions about visiting

For this redesign I plan to add organization and character to the main pages of Camlann's website. My goal is to make it easier for potential visitors to learn about Camlann, plan their visit, and purchase tickets all on the same website.

Process

Content Outline

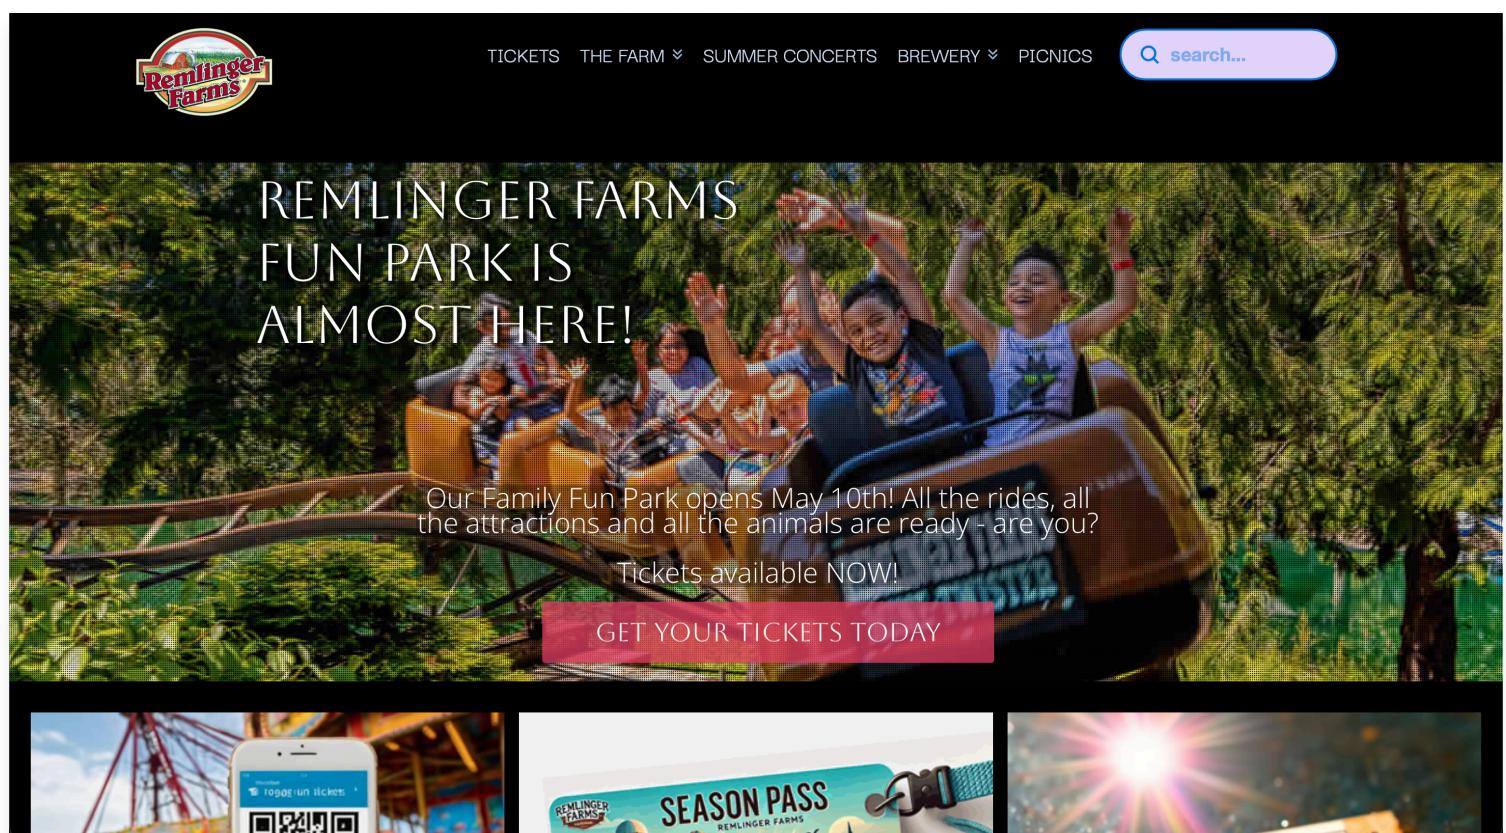

Organization of the current site and the content of each page.

Competition

Remlinger Farms

Large family farm offering a cafe, brewery, and market in the same area as Camlann Medieval Village. Very busy website featuring a lot of photos of what to expect when visiting. The typeface used is a bit difficult to read

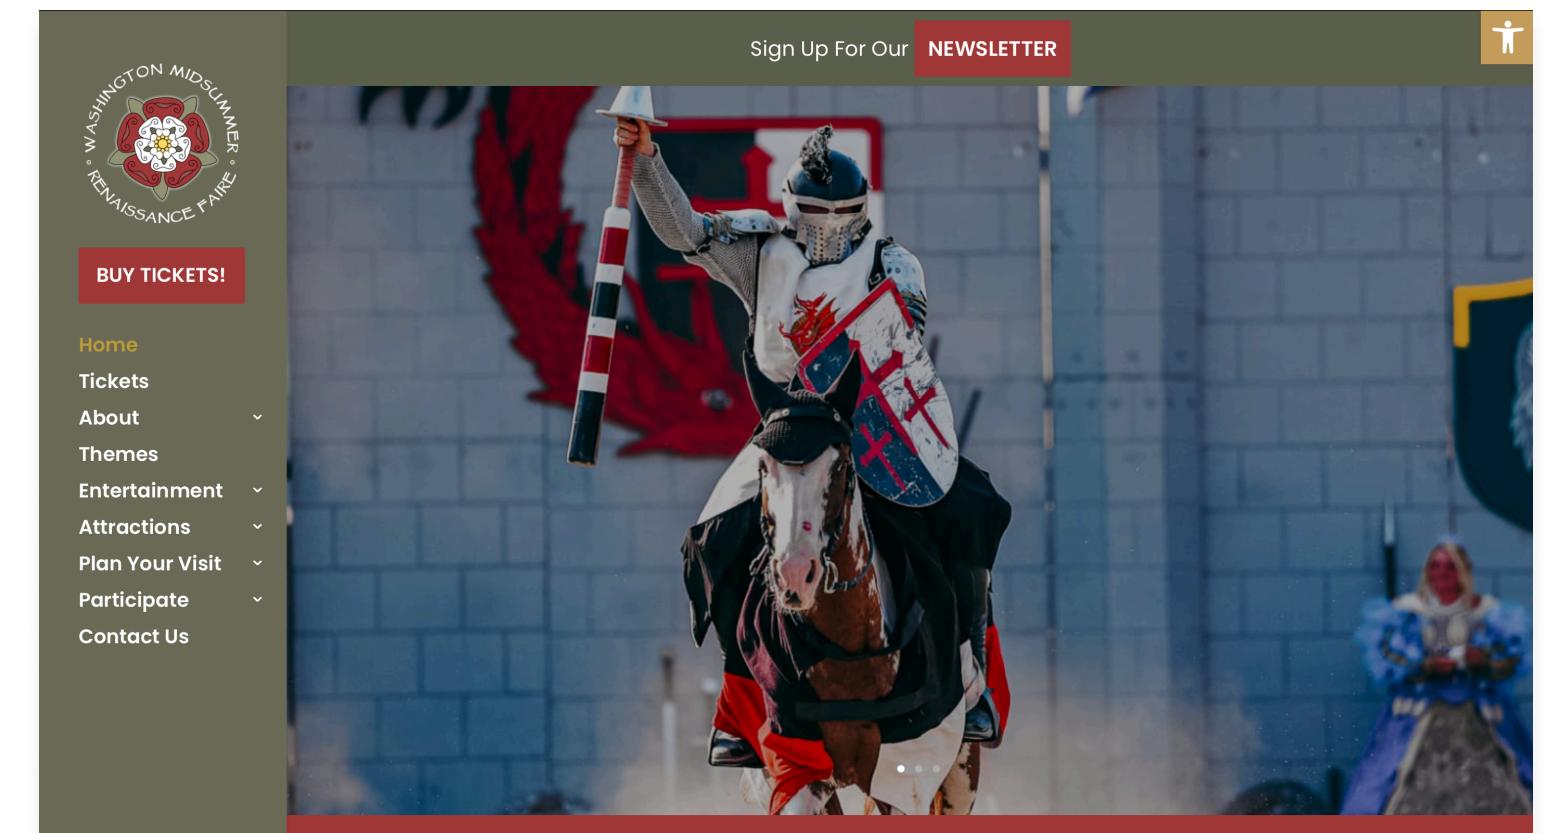

Pomeroy Farms

Clean layout, very simple. Typeface here also a bit hard to read, very little type hierarchy. The main logo takes up a lot of space on the nav bar. A bit difficult to find information.

Washington Midsummer Renaissance Faire

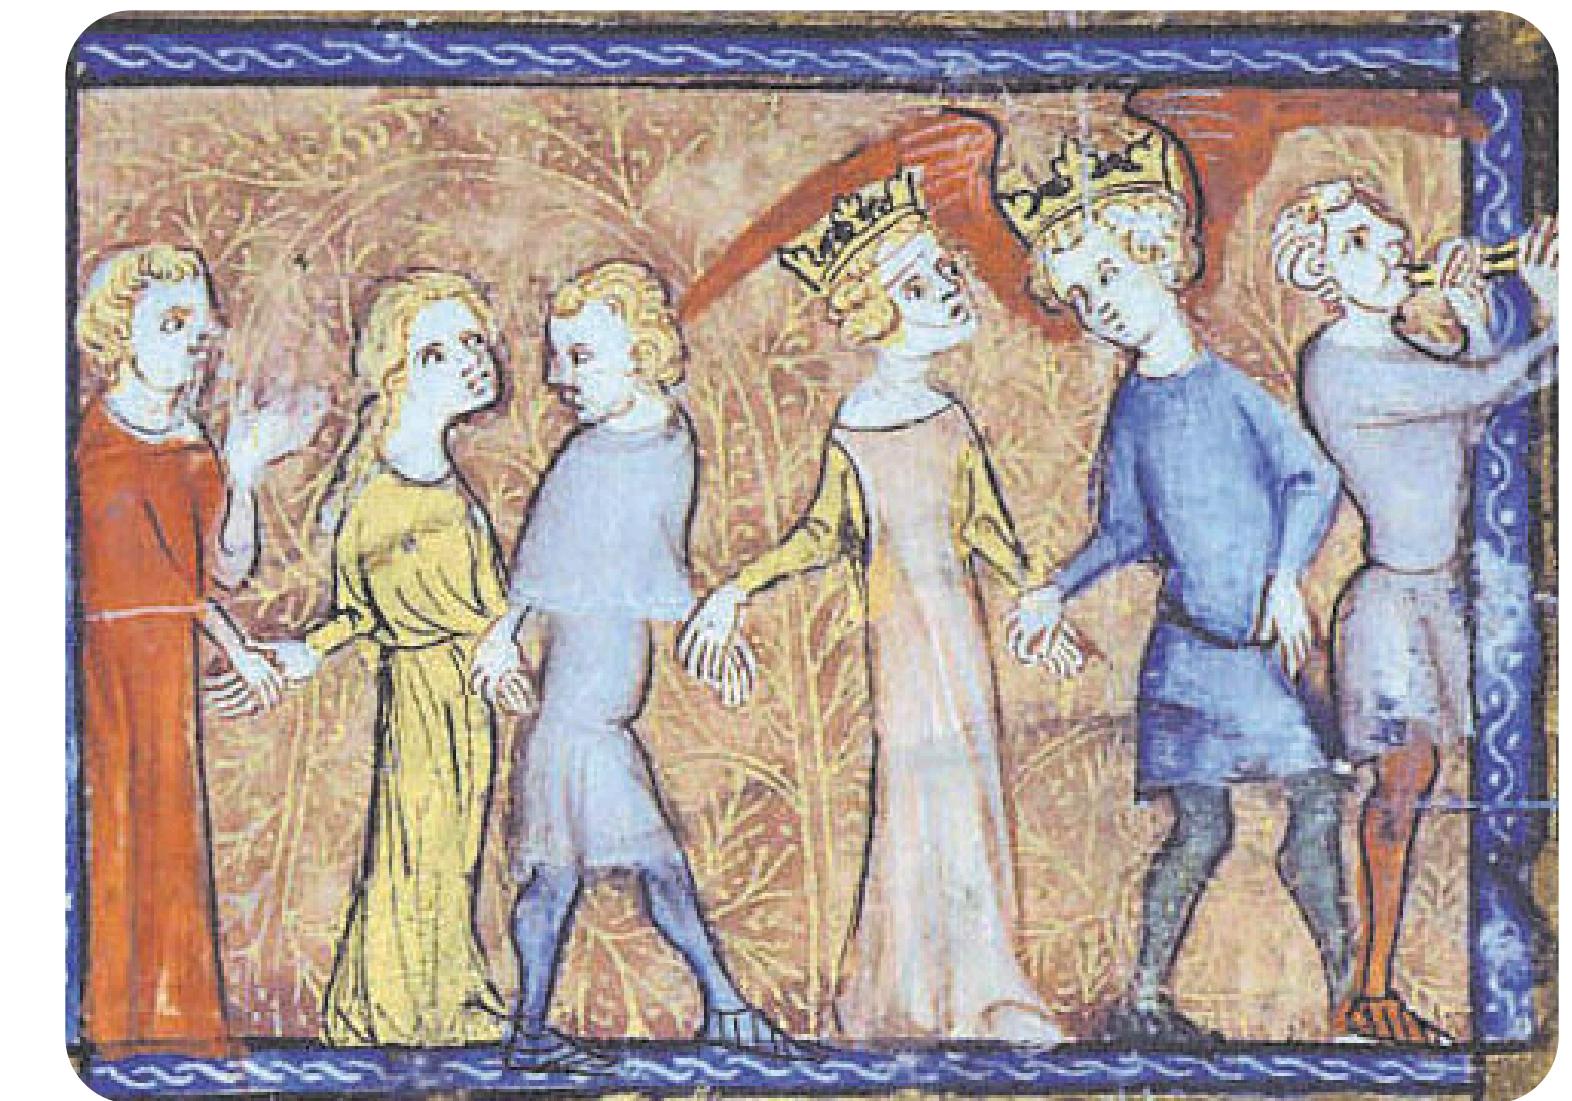

Well organized, has a distinct brand and look to it. They use a lot of photography to showcase the offerings and events.

Messaging

Current messaging focuses on encouraging the public to engage with history and the arts through the experience that Camlann provides.

There are minimal photos on their website actually showcasing the space and the activities. Though they have recently introduced a gallery tab during the making of this project, it is mainly sourced from visitor's social media and not done professionally. The main imagery used throughout marketing is historical medieval pieces. All of this together creates a non cohesive brand.

Positioning

What mainly sets Camlann apart is the medieval aspect, most if not all the other living history museums focus on local settlement history and tend to be agriculture based.

Camlann stands out among them by offering experience with other aspects of history such as performing arts and various crafts such as hearth cooking and blacksmithing.

There is also the unique addition of a themed restaurant which many living history farms do not have, that is a great feature to have that may persuade potential visitors to choose them over the competition.

Design Comps

First round of design iterations based on the previous wireframes

I chose to use Koho as a display typeface to showcase some medieval style character while not getting too gimmicky and illegible. Then paired it with Inter to keep everything simple and readable.

I also utilized green blocks to organize the different sections, so they stood out.

This mobile design comp shows the homepage of the Camlann Medieval Village website. It features a large header image of a medieval building with the title "Camlann Medieval Village". Below the header, there's a green call-to-action button for "Saturday & Sunday May to September 12:00 pm - 5:00 pm". The main content area includes sections for "Upcoming Festival May Faire May 10th - 11th", "Our authentic architecture, food, clothing, and demonstrations allow visitors to walk a few important steps in the shoes of our ancestors.", and "Feasts & Festivals". At the bottom, there's a newsletter sign-up form and a "Subscribe" button.

This mobile design comp shows the "Life in the Village" page. It features a large header image of people in medieval clothing. Below the header, there's a green call-to-action button for "Saturday & Sunday May to September 12:00 pm - 5:00 pm". The main content area includes sections for "Bors Hede Restaurant", "Live Craft Demonstrations", "Historical Presentations", and "Festivals & Feasts". At the bottom, there's a newsletter sign-up form and a "Subscribe" button.

This mobile design comp shows the "Board of Directors" page. It features a large header image of two people. Below the header, there's a green call-to-action button for "Saturday & Sunday May to September 12:00 pm - 5:00 pm". The main content area includes sections for "Board of Directors", "Volunteer", "Donate", and "Frequently Asked Questions". At the bottom, there's a newsletter sign-up form and a "Subscribe" button.

This mobile design comp shows the "Contact" page. It features a large header image of a person lying on the grass. Below the header, there's a green call-to-action button for "Saturday & Sunday May to September 12:00 pm - 5:00 pm". The main content area includes sections for "Contact", "Home", "Events", "About Us", "Volunteer", "Donate", and "Sign up for our Newsletter". At the bottom, there's a newsletter sign-up form and a "Subscribe" button.

Usability testing

Feedback

I worked with three other people to test my prototype and find any spots that were confusing or not effective. Some feedback that I got was...

- Including a clear way to go back to the top of the page
- Adding more negative space and breathing room between elements, images, and the type
- Making the options to buy tickets and donate more distinct and clearly emphasized on screen

Changes

- Added buy tickets option to the navigation bar
- Included highlighted buttons for donating, ticket purchasing, and volunteering on home page
- Added a button at the bottoms of the pages that takes you back up to the top

Refinements

I added more visible buttons for donation, volunteering, and buy tickets so viewers of the website could find those options easier.

Then I removed some of the green block sectioning as it made the page feel more airy and less cramped. I also added the back to top button to easily bring users back to the navigation, giving them a more obvious option outside the footer.

Open year-round for dinner service on Friday and Saturday, with our first seating at 5 PM and our last seating at 7 PM.

Welcome, traveler, to the Bors Hede Inne, the Northwest's most unique dining experience, where you may enjoy our medieval dinner-theatre presentation.

Sumptuous platters of fresh food, prepared from authentic 14th century recipes, are brought before you. Sight, smell, taste, and touch are brought into play as your fingers, spoon, and borde knyfe dip into uniquely sauced entrees, served on platters, to be eaten from your bread trencher (plate).

Village Demonstrations vary each day, and may include archery, blacksmithing, textile production, animal care, artwork, gardening, hearth cooking, shoe-making, spinning, weaving, clothing design, and other household skills.

Historical Presentations

Challenges

One thing that I struggled with for this project was blending together the novelty of the non-profit and the fun nature of it with readability and usability. I also had a difficult time ideating and sketching for this project with that balance in mind. Spacing and font size also gave me some trouble, it was hard to imagine things on a screen, to size, and navigate the amount of negative space on the screen.

Reflection

Overall I feel like I learned a lot about the process of designing a website, which I had never really done before, and I found it really interesting and engaging. I'm excited to explore web design further.
